Dear reader,

Yesterday you received an older edition of our newsletter — we apologise for the technical error!

Here is our last newsletter of 2023, where we focus on climate and conflict. In many of the world's most fragile areas, climate change is not an abstract concept future concern. It is happening now with millions affected by droughts and floods. These climate-induced natural disasters often lead to new conflicts and insecurity.

The following articles, publications and interviews explore this issue from the perspectives of: an Ethiopian case study, meetings on climate, peace and security COP28, and the intersection of climate and health policymaking.
